TeRING SAGA Iso.Age-related macular degeneration: A review of recent literature. The development of dry age-related macular degeneration (AMD) is of interest to researchers and clinicians alike. While the exact etiology is yet to be determined, the earliest pathological changes associated with AMD are seen within the retinal pigment epithelium (RPE). As RPE cells degenerate, and their physical barrier and metabolism deteriorates, the effects are seen clinically and appear as pigmentary alterations on the macula and extra-macular retina. The pathogenesis of these changes is multifactorial, and includes features of both degenerative disease and infection. The progression of the disease is most often silent, and in the end stage of the disease, the macular structure becomes permanently altered. Management is directed at controlling progression as well as providing symptomatic relief. Patients with classic features of advanced AMD have been found to experience reduced visual acuity, whereas patients with atrophic and subretinal pigment epithelial atrophy tend to experience a range of symptoms from photopsia, metamorphopsia, scotomas, and dyschromatopsia. Recent research has attempted to better understand the clinical characteristics of the disease, its progression, the functional effects of the disease, as well as the best methods for its treatment. In this paper, we review the most recent literature pertaining to the diagnosis and treatment of AMD.The original question was: If I'm currently suffering from health issues, and due to lack of energy caused by these issues and poor diet I am running out of storage in my storage drives as they get filled, what method of file backup would be suitable for backing up my entire (non-OS) storage drive if this drive fails? I have hit a stumbling block with this question and
