You are an inexperienced boy named Tarnished, a peasant born in the forest of the Lands Between with countless others who are turned into humans during a fierce battle with the beings of darkness, the

Zodiac. The goal of the game is to join an army known as the “Elden Ring” as a Tarnished (Elbow), and become an Elden Lord (Lizard) in the army. Q: How to feed environmental context into a custom code action of a gradle task

In a gradle build we have a task where we want to do some processing of a file (e.g. generate a new file). The gradle docs have a reference to an example class Action, which is a single-method implementation of the gradle protocol. What we want to do is to create a custom task that, while expecting to accept a file, actually does whatever we need to do to that file. We still want to be able to inject the context of the build (e.g. gradle options) into the task, just as the example Action task does. So, here are our requirements:

- We need to provide a file as the argument to the task, and, when we call the task from our script, we need to provide an appropriate File object based on the execution context
- We need to be able to inject the execution context into the Action object we create and store somewhere. It should be accessible from our task implementation as well as the main script.
- We need to be able to carry out some processing on the file, but we do not have

Q: How to type the @ symbol in Vim I've never been able to type the @ symbol in vim, for instance I'm using vim 7.3 on mac os x lion Thanks A: It's possible, but it requires a load of global configuration. You need to have configured the keyboard layout for the US keyboard in Vim. On my Mac OS X Lion, I have this in my.vimrc: set nocompatible set encoding=utf-8 fileencoding=utf-8 set rtp+=`$RTP_DIR/en_us.vim` Filetype plugin on map d :BufRead. `$RTP_DIR/en_us.vim inoremap d :BufRead. $RTP_DIR/en_us.vim` I mapped d to call the built-in BufRead autocomplete plugin. Now, I can type @ to type the command (see :help '@'). Q: Get Enum from SelectedItem of EnumListBox I have a ListBox with Enum Value. I tried to get the enum value from the selected index of the selected item, but it didnt work. My Code public enum EnumTest { A, B, C } public partial class Test : Form { public Test() { InitializeComponent(); } private void button1_Click(object sender, EventArgs e) { EnumTest enum1 = EnumTest.A; int index

= listBox1.SelectedIndex; MessageBox.Show(index.ToString()); if (listBox1.SelectedItem

This invention relates to a large volume gamma camera, more particularly to an improved collimator for use in a gamma camera. In some known gamma camera systems, the radiation emitted from a patient is received and passed through a collimator onto a scintillation plate which is optically coupled to photomultiplier tubes for detecting radiation therein. The collimator serves to direct the radiation to the plate such that in order that the radiation passing through the collimator can be absorbed by the scintillation plate uniformly, a ring type edge of the collimator should be located behind an edge of the scintillation plate. However, collimators such as disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 4,316,105 or U.S. Pat. No. 4,312,394 are less efficient at radiation absorption and, therefore, require more scintillation plates than collimators of other designs, for producing the same signal strength. In addition, scintillation plates of different material are required when the collimator is of different designs. The above-mentioned patents disclose collimators in which the ring of collimators are separated by a central, columnar beam shield. Such central beam shields are undesirable in certain applications. One such application in which such beams are undesirable is a nuclear medicine camera where the collimators generally are made of lead and the beam shields would interfere with the visualization of the radioactive sources.
