To find out more about Mimir's Recruit, please check the FAQ below. Frequently Asked Questions:

----- How can I complete all games? You need to find all the possibilities of solutions of each game. Each game has a challenge which lasts for three seconds. You need to find the solution as quickly as possible, in order to get the highest score in that challenge. The difficulty of each challenge scales with the difficulty of previous challenges, so you always have something to do. You can check the scoring on the win screen. How is this different to other logic games? Every game has a unique sequence of logic operations (movement/rotations/reading of runes). By deduction you will need to find out the correct runes for the correct situations and in the correct order. The game starts with one rune displayed for each position. As you solve the game you deduct the correct runes from the positions. Once you have solved all the runes you can proceed to the next level. Note that you can deduct runes which are already visible. How can I avoid failure? One of the most important things to do in Mimir's Recruit is to solve the game as fast as possible. The game doesn't wait for the three seconds, it will deduct runes each second. If you are looking to beat a score from someone else, you need to find solutions faster than them, in order to be successful. The safest bet is to solve the game as quickly as you can, check the position of your runes as quickly as you can and solve the game. How many runes do I get to use? You get to use as many as you like. What happens if I fail to find the solution? Nothing, the game is over when you have the correct solution. You will be shown the error message and you will need to wait three seconds before you can attempt to find the solution again. How can I improve my score? You can submit your score to online high score boards to get a bit of a boost. Note that these are the same online high score boards that are used

On the Xbox One dashboard, select the console, then go to Settings, and then Internet Options.
3. Visit the connection settings page
You can choose to keep your Internet connection permanently on, or turn the connection on and off, and even change the frequency (how often the console checks for the connection).
4. Activate your Xbox Live Gold subscription
The process is different for each platform. The Xbox app uses the same steps as the Xbox One dashboard.
5. Play any game in your library, using your Microsoft account and password
To play any game in your Xbox Live Gold-subscribed account, you have to link it to your Xbox One. To do this, log into the Xbox One with your account and the same password you use for the Microsoft account you registered with.
6. You can now play any game in your library, using your Microsoft account and password
To play any game, launch the Xbox app on your device, and sign in using your Microsoft account and password.
7. Offline play
After you've played some online multiplayer games, your Xbox One will turn off the connection and play any games on your console memory. In the console, go to Settings, then Energize or Local Streaming to turn off the connection. The app will work offline.
8. Take the Xbox with you if you use Skype
Your Microsoft account is your account when you use Skype on your PC, Mac, tablet

What's new:

SuperTanks, often called SuperTanks, are a group of tank destroyers developed in the first half of the 20th century. Early developments James L. Lyons and Winfield Scott Cunningham of the U.S. Army's Ordnance Department were the principal designers responsible for developing the concept. From at least 1911, developers of the "land ship" concept had long known that the effectiveness of the two principal means of tank defense were the ability to operate independently and the ability to deliver a concentrated ammunition effect to the target area. Effective crew and tank concentration was determined by the physical separation of the personnel from the weight of the vehicle. A superficial look at the tanks would not reveal this relationship or its importance in the "land ship" concept. This formulation was swept aside to develop the combination of tank and tank destroyer. Cunningham and Lyons tried a couple of alternatives at the Fort Leavenworth Ordnance School in 1911. One attempt was the "command tank", which used two small ammunition boxes mounted on the back of the tank for the 6-pounder field piece, and each was commanded by a driver. The weapon could be used for either area or long-range firing. This technology was later developed into the machine guns and light artillery pieces mounted on tanks. If the 6-pounder could hit the target at a high rate of fire, the chances for a hit were excellent. Another experiment was the mortar tank (or mortar carrier) that used the vehicle as an ammunition carrier for a 75-millimeter mortar, which were scarce at the time, so the vehicle mounted three weapons, one per side. Oddly, given the addition of the artillery piece to the list of commands, the C tank is the only land vehicle to fire a non-artillery weapon, and only a single shot. Regardless, the concept was validated. The concept was independently initiated at the Assigned Use Experimental Station (now Aberdeen Proving Grounds), Maryland, by Lynn A. Truitt in 1911. His 2½ ton tractor was the first practical purpose built tank. Truitt was interested in going over land, finally developing his invention to produce an "overland land vehicle". This was the first tank ever built, but it was conceived as an infantry support weapon. The first prototype appeared in 1914 in the Stanley Military Garden in Illinois. Although this machine was capable of moving over land, it was only a concept that was never realized. Truitt tried again at the Armored Force's School in 1916, this
