Over the past 20 years, the Dutch choreographer David Middelndorp has created a series of work that are closely linked to the theme of technology and the connection between people. He has connected the gestures of today's world leaders with technology and created dance sculpture that gives people the opportunity to experience their own hand gestures and hand movement in a magical-comic world. By merging the two different elements, this new collaborative experience creates a whole, which provides a departure from the usual dance and music genre. By incorporating the VR experience into the content, a new kind of motion control and interaction method is created for the player. It creates an experience which moves in a playful and happy manner. What's New A lot of fun in this new event skins for our two popular characters, Wendy and JICE!Tuberculosis (TB) is a bacterial disease, which is caused by mycobacterium tuberculosis, infecting over one-third of the world's population and leading to 9 million deaths in 2007 alone. In spite of significant scientific progress in the field, no protective vaccine is currently available. In an effort to develop a novel vaccine, we hypothesize that targeting the cytosolic function of the alpha-isoform of mycobacterial V-ATPase (aV1) and its functional relevance in mycobacterial survival and virulence, will result in the development of a successful vaccine. Although no functional enzymatic activity of aV1 has been identified yet, the bacterial protein is localized at the inner membrane of the mycobacterial cell and is required for normal cellular function. Substantial evidence suggests that aV1 is directly involved in mycobacterial survival and virulence since a) mutant mycobacteria are more susceptible to intracellular killing and invasion of macrophages, b) certain anti-tubercular drugs are shown to target the aV1, and c) a V1- specific subunit-specific monoclonal antibody (mAb) showed a potent bactericidal activity. In our approach, we have taken the advantage of these previous observations and propose to evaluate the therapeutic efficacy of an anti-aV1 mAb (EP16R) alone or in combination with a cocktail of adjuvants (Montanide/BCG adjuvant), in a mouse model of TB. Our model will allow us to identify the best treatment for this disease at the early stages of infection. This proposal will capitalize on our recent discovery that aV1 is an important target to

: Presenting my Putt-Putt Golf Set-Up Welcome to my putting challenge. Last year I posted my set-up routine, so if this is your first read of these posts-start from there! This challenge will be aimed at tournament players wanting to go to that next level, or putting instructors. By “next level”, I mean the point where you can usually place high enough on a consistent basis in a tournament to move into the playoffs. If this is you, then by all means read these posts. Your putting will improve for sure! If you want putters to learn new tricks to help your game, then come back in August. Hopefully this will seem like a warmup to you but not to a counterbalancer, so read on, parents. About those goals How do you know you are on the right track? Because you see yourself above your current level. Putters above their current level are shaking and dancing like impostors for the simple fact that they are good golfers. Don’t let this confuse you. It is a sign that you are on the right track if you can “watch those putts disappear.” You are seeing less of the mistakes you used to see. The good putting is the easy stuff. Through putting practice, you will see improvements. It is easier to get quicker about your practice time than to get quicker with your mind, which is the real challenge. In putting practice, there will be “Ptolemy” moments, or moments where you feel nervous or anxious. You will also, from time to time, be frustrated, angry, bored, worried, etc. You may not always understand why you feel that way. I can promise you this: if you are having a Ptolemy moment, you are on the right track. Keep practicing and enjoy it. All is well. The exact routine You may find that your routine has changed over time. It may seem to get a little longer at the beginning and then shorter later on. It may also seem too fast and intensive at the beginning, and then slow to the end. These are perfect signs of progress that I’ll explain shortly. You will find that putting has become the most important and difficult part of your game. Yet until now, it was the easy part. You will often face change in the middle of your routine due to illness or injury. It’s best

Savage Suzerain is a Savage Worlds adventure deck designed for a game of Fantasy Grounds. The deck contains 54 cards, all designed to be used in conjunction with Fantasy Grounds and the Savage Worlds ruleset. As the owner of the deck, you'll get to know the cards you own and the special abilities they have. Each card contains narrative information, powers, conditions and consequences. The narrative information will give the GM some leeway when creating a scenario for you to play in as well as adding a bit of flavour. Power cards allow the PC to have a bit of fun with each other and the GM, often rewarding them for turning a quick insult into an outright murderous argument. Conditions are simple but potent ways that the GM can give them a bit of a foul mood and don't always have to show up if the PC is not in the mood to play. Consequences will help the GM handle certain situations and are simple but effective ways to encourage the PC to keep going. Some examples are "Pound on the table for the rest of the session" or "Have to play in a watchtower for an evening." For the GM, some rules exist to help get them started. This file contains the rules to use these cards in Savage Suzerain. What's New in Version 1.0.0? - This package now contains 60 cards, not 54, for a total of 138 cards! - The cards use Savage Worlds as the basis for their power, narrative and condition mechanics. This means the narrative can be turned into a condition card. - The rules are designed to be compatible with Fantasy Grounds version 3.3.6 and higher and Savage Worlds v3.5 A note on Savage Worlds: Savage Worlds is a really fun rules system - which is why we created Savage Suzerain. One of the things about Savage Worlds that's really really fun is the use of adventure deck cards, to add a little spice to each session. Well, now you can have the Savage Suzerain Adventure Deck, custom built to add extra zing to your adventurers, heroes and demigods. Beautifully illustrated with glorious full-color high resolution art, they'll add a bit of class to any gaming table. and add 54 (+9 bonus cards) cool effects to the characters. A one-off use of a power from the Patron God of Weather? I'll take that lightning strike! From Divine Intervention to Dumb Luck, Temporary Transcendence to a little Narr
