Online play turns the game into a fast paced party game8/10 the EscapistFirst person tactical strategy combat game Pros: 5/10 Multiplayer by allowing you to decide which factions to join and the choices that you can makeA modified dual-display mirror for simultaneous interplanar and orbital angulation for femoral planning in navigated lateral approach. Navigated lateral approach is widely used in hip surgery, which reduces radiation burden to both surgeon and patient by using navigation. However, it is restricted by some problems such as blindness of vision, breathing control and so on. In this study, we developed a modified dual-display mirror to overcome the restricted situation. A modified dual-display mirror was developed for simultaneous interplanar and orbital angulation by modifying a commercial dual-display stereoscopy system (Arthrex®, USA). Our study protocol was approved by Institutional Review Board of the National Yang-Ming University Medical Center. The feasibility and accuracy were tested in a cadaver bone model. Femoral osteotomy was simulated by the modified system. Accuracy between the predefined planned position and actual position was measured. In addition, the radiation exposure was recorded when using the dual-display stereoscopy system and the modified dual-display system in the osteotomy simulation. The accuracy of dual-display and modified dual-display system were comparable. Using a modified dual-display system, we could decrease radiation dose by 63 % and motion artifacts were decreased by 73 % in comparison with the commercial dual-display system. A modified dual-display mirror was successfully developed for simultaneous interplanar and orbital angulation, which significantly decreased radiation dose and motion artifacts. It could provide a useful and widely applicable tool in femoral planning in the navigated lateral approach.The War On Drugs By the early 1990s, the war on drugs was lagging behind the enemy. When we'd stop someone who was carrying drugs, we'd take the drugs off them, but we wouldn't arrest them. When we'd arrest someone who had no drugs on them, we'd take the drugs, but we wouldn't arrest them. We'd try to arrest as many people as possible for as many crimes as we could, but we'd let most of them walk away. The police could have taken more drugs by arresting more people. The war on drugs was ill-suited to the goals we had for it, and it would never improve our drug abuse problem.Send this page to someone via email Share

What's new in Mad Dojo:

The Clan of Death (,) was a joint military command made up of Iraqi military forces with the rank of Lieutenant General or Major General within the Iraqi armed forces, and irregular militias. The group was led by Abdul-Qadir al-Naher, a criminal who led the Islamic Army in Iraq (IAI) which worked under Saddam Hussein's orders and helped turn him into the brutal dictator that he became. Clan of Death were also known as the "Red Hand" or "Death Hand" (). The Militia also used the nickname Red Hand Commando or Al Hakim ("The Imam"; also Haji Bakr). Abdul-Qadir al-Naher was the group's leader until his arrest by US forces in December 2003; subsequent reports indicate that during his time at the helm of the group, it was responsible for taking part in the killing of well over 15,000 civilians. The group also burned, executed, and cannibalised their victims. The term "Clan of Death" refers to Shia extremists in more general context, while al-Naher and his group of militias were an Iraqi branch of the Islamic Army. Al-Naher, speaking under interrogation, states he grew up in the al-Zawba'an area near the Iran-Iraq War border between what is now Iran and Iraq, in 1980s. While serving as a student soldier in the Iraqi Army, he and "Hussain" met briefly in 1990 and 2008, and became friends. During the US occupation, al-Naher took his duties seriously and used his position to spread violence and outrages in the predominantly Shia southern provinces. Al-Naher subsequently fled to Syria in 2003, where he briefly joined the Syrian Revolutionary Command Council, before returning to Iraq in 2003 as part of the 5th Special Forces Group. Under his guidance, the group rose to become a powerful element of Saddam's strategy to eradicate opposition to his regime and becoming infamous for sadistic acts such as beating and killing detainees. The killing of 15,000 civilians was widely reported, although it has not been confirmed by the Pentagon. Al-Naher arrived in Erbil in 2007. And with the rise of the Islamic State of Iraq (ISI) after 2014, he was forced to take refuge at his ancestral villa in the farmland village of Al-

Sakhtab. During the last days of the Islamic State, al-Naher took control of a 7,000-m
