The job scheduler is a specialized tool for managing multiple, time-dependent tasks with a flexible scheduling algorithm. It is designed to deal with "unit" jobs, which consists of a task, a time range over which it needs to run, and an action. You may choose between three scheduling algorithms: fixed interval: the time between two executions of the task is constant; fixed rate: the time between two executions is constant, but the rate varies; unit interval: the time between two executions is constant, but the rate can vary. One can also specify a priority, which determines the order in which the tasks are executed. Configurations are stored in XML-based configuration files, which are easiest to maintain. You can set parameters, such as execution times, priorities, and scheduled tasks. The GUI is very user friendly, with a clear layout and logical menus. Some of the features include: time groups, which groups the tasks with respect to time interval, time templates, that can be used to create a simple schedule for repetitive tasks, time
