Role of alpha-methylene-gamma-butyrolactone and alpha-bromohydroquinone in the synthesis of 2'-methylenehelicene-gamma-butyrolactone-4-acetic acid methyl ester, a highly potent anticancer agent. [reaction: see text] 2'-Methylenehelicene-gamma-butyrolactone-4-acetic acid methyl ester 1 was prepared from gamma-butyrolactone in four steps.

The utility of the title compound as a highly potent antitumor agent was demonstrated by examination of its in vitro and in vivo activities. Q: Divi / Child Theme / Customizer I created a child theme with Divi on a website I'm creating. If I want to go into the Divi main theme and change a few things around, it's listed as a page template, but when I use the customizer it doesn't seem to make any changes. I've also added a style.css into the theme directory, and it's being picked up, but the specific parts it's changing are incorrect. I've tried various edits to the CSS, but they don't make a difference. A: The CSS that the editor uses to preview elements is built into the master file by default. For best results, the CSS used by the editor should be the same as the style.css file you have edited. (I remember reading this somewhere, maybe from a help thread here on the forums.)
