Windows 7, Professional Retail Full Cracked The spatial distribution of amino acids and total nitrogen in the benthic fauna of a Mediterranean ecosystem. Vertical and horizontal distributions of selected nutrients (amino acids and total nitrogen) were investigated in the different taxa (snails, bivalves, polychaetes, oligochaetes and isopods) found in a Mediterranean lagoon. The data were treated in the case of all taxa in one group (SI), and for bivalves, snails, and polychaetes in another group (BI) by means of simple regression analysis. Variables were explained by surface sediment deposition rates, which were also used to estimate the latitudinal distribution of these nutrient amounts in the lagoon. The results revealed that total nitrogen is an excellent indicator
