Dream Chaser: This was the first massively successful sim with online play, and it's still going strong today. With the Dream Chaser web socket client, you can upload your homemade track and instantly see how it runs. Drag the line and drop in the gates as you see fit, and share your tracks with friends on the internet. When you connect your SimRacer account to the Dream Chaser client, you'll also get access to advanced features like the "Track Editor", which is included with the Track Builder DLC. Those editing features will be explained in the Track Editor Guide, which will be available alongside the DLC. Track Editor: Let your creativity run wild and modify the parameters to get that ideal track design. With this DLC you'll also get access to the track editor tools. The editor enables you to build custom made track configurations for your own custom made race events. Race Settings: You can adjust the game settings in game, and make sure that your custom track is built for the maximum possible performance for the model that you're using. You'll need to have at least a decent amount of horsepower available on a low-end game card, and you'll need at least a fair amount of processing power available on a mid-range to high-end game card.

You'll need to also be running a relatively new stable version of SimRacer. Please note that we do not guarantee the availability of this DLC. It's up to the individual how fast he can create a track, and how fast the work can be transferred and shared online. Depending on your hardware and internet connection, it's possible that the delivery of the tools may need some time. If you want to use the provided tools with a large, never-ending set of lines and gates, you need to have a decent amount of time available to download and process the data. The potential is great! Download the FPV Air 2 Track Builder today and get practicing custom layouts as fast as possible! Movement It's an adventure game. You explore the map using the inventory and mouse/command keys, go forward and move left/right, whilst up and down is used for direct movement only. The game includes a 10 level scenario, many shorttime puzzles, with the possibility of ending the game by meeting Elisa at the end of the scenario. Control: Keybinding is remappable, but I recommend changing some of the bindings to be consistent with your desired control scheme and avoid that the game is unplayable. Playable on Linux with Unity, I recommend moving the cursor to the center of the screen using tilda/desktop. Bindings are 'e' and 'a' for movement and 'ctrl' for direct movement. The mouse is active in the game, but its coordinates are ignored. Mouse controls are passed through for testing in the controllerEmulation: Consoles: You can emulate almost any controller you have. For the joysticks, the default values are [X] - 541, [Y] - 549, [A] - 553, [B] - 527 and rotate - 456. For buttons, the default is [L1] = 10, [L2] = 6, [R1] = 40, [R2] = 42, [L3] = 37, [R3] = 48 and [START] = 61. You can remap some of these keys using USB Gameport Control. Computers: I recommend the latest version of InJoy (I have not tested it with Unity), which natively works with all major operating systems (Windows, Ubuntu, OS X). Windows: (you can install it as add-on in Steam) Ubuntu: (you can install it as add-on in Steam) MacOS: (you can install it as add-on in Steam) Linux: You will have to compile the source yourself. You will need these libraries: libusb-1.0 and GLib, and to compile it run 'make'. If you find a lack of OpenGL support in Ubuntu/Linux, you can install XQuartz and patch the build script:
