Haskell: How to write a function which receives arguments as tuples I'm trying to define a function in Haskell which receives arguments in the form of tuples and returns a list A: You're looking for (): *Main> :t (:): () :: [a] -> [a] *Main> f (1, 2) [1,2] *Main> f [] [] In short, (:) is function that returns another function. If you give it an argument list of length 1 or more, it returns a list of those arguments. If you give it an empty list, it returns the empty list. To convert a list of tuples into a function, you could use f (map (\(x,y) -> x+y): to convert the list of tuples into a list of numbers. A: Rather than inventing a new type, you could just use the built-in function flip. f, where f : a -> b is the function f applied to its arguments in reverse order. A: You can use foldl ((): (head) (tail)) [] to fold from the right. Or use (:) (foldl f ys xs) when the elements of the tuple are provided in order. Q: App Engine Flexible, load balancer and Load balancer Target Groups for Cloud Functions So I have been using this tutorial

Set in a forest with mysterious atmosphere and a lot of creepy creatures, the player assumes the role of a warrior of Light who is entrusted with bringing the Light of the World. In this grim adventure, he has to leave the cave where he was born and explore the forest to help the villagers. His main goal will be to look for his father who lives far from home with a magical relic. Meanwhile, he will find a lot of shadows that contain information about the secrets of the world. The game does not tell a long story. It consists of 6 chapters that each one is a part of an epic story. The gameplay is really easy. The main problem is the lack of interaction with the environment and an awkward checkpoint system. But don't think too much of it. These are the best things of this game: 1. The superb music. 2. The interesting atmosphere. 3. The gameplay is really easy. You don't need to be a gamer to enjoy. 4. The graphics are very simple and sharp. And now please enjoy this fascinating journey:1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to applying electronic devices, and more specifically to an attachment system for a computer and a method of applying the system to a computer and an object. 2. Description of the Background Art Many people enjoy conducting their business using a mobile computing device. Examples of mobile computing devices include laptop computers, portable digital assistants (PDAs), etc. Often, a user may be at a particular location at a particular time, and may wish to utilize a mobile computing device. It would be desirable to provide a system that would allow a user to quickly and easily attach a mobile computing device to a computer, without requiring the user to carry the mobile computing device to the computer.NYC & The Rock: my baby, my heart & my home Last week, several family members and I welcomed our new baby girl into our home. Our visit to her "home" was one filled with a few surprises... Room at The Rock 1. Steppin' to the beat of her own drums! I feel like every day with my new baby is different, but most of my days are spent in awe as she dances to her own beat. She doesn't know how to walk yet and has no idea how to crawl. She is a cautious but determined climber. She can grab a toy I've been holding for her and run c9d1549cdd
