I was wondering if anyone had encountered what happens to the "Create new window" button in a PDF in Chrome. I often encounter the button when printing a PDF file (right-click - Print to a new window). It sometimes behaves like "Create new window" button has simply not been declared. When I right-click on the button, it doesn't allow me to select the "Create a new window" option. Sometimes after opening the PDF in a different browser, the button shows again as an image. Is there any other way to disable the "Create new window" button? A: Create new window button is an attribute of the PDF file. This is how it should be handled: Disable the Create new window button by adding a button with the same attributes as the button. Create new window button cannot be disabled by user in the browser: In order to properly display/print PDF file, browser needs to create new browser window for the PDF content. But button of the Create new window in PDF browser is always disabled. To disable 6d1f23a050
