of the article as it appeared originally on PCWorld. A new benchmark test of the Eppendorf 5810 R made it through our lab in less than half the time taken by an Eppendorf 5804. How long does it take to spin down an HTS 5800? Is there a more suitable 5800? If so, which one? There is a comparison guide to help you figure that out on the German manufacturer's Web site.

How to Test Your 5800R The unit must be removed from the stand and placed on a flat surface. When the machine is running. For a more in-depth comparison of the Eppendorf 5800 R and the 5800S, check out the Rar file in the download section. The unit must be removed from the stand and placed on a flat surface. When the basicVIDEOJET EXCELÂ .Q: How do I add a new row to a jTable in java? I know this seems like a simple task, but I've been trying to figure this out for hours and can't seem to find a relevant answer. I'm trying to use an array for the cells I want in the row. In my case, I'm taking a string for the cell text and a double for the cell value. If I change the double to int, it works fine.

Just can't seem to figure out how to use the array. Here's what I have now:

```
public
static class NameEditCell extends DefaultCellEditor { private.JTable table; private String temp; private Vector
nameList = new Vector();
public NameEditCell(String temp, JTable table) { super(t able.getTableHeader(), new Component()); this.temp =
temp; this.table = table; }
```

```
@Override public Object getCellEditorValue() { Vector nameList = table.getModel().
getValueAt(table.getSelected Row(),0).toString(); temp = nameList.toString(); return temp; } @Override public

```
Component getTableCellEdit orComponent(JTable table, Object value, boolean
isSelected, int row, int column) { this.table = table;
table.setRowHeight((int)
table.getRowHeight
