I imported the contacts from my PC's Microsoft Office Outlook and put them into the Numbers application to the inboxes they are to be sent to. I then used WhatsApp's own "import" option to bring in the database using an USB cable. WhatsApp has a built-in feature that automatically makes it possible for you to send SMS messages that you receive to all of the people on the conversation. There are two ways to use this: you can send the SMS from the WhatsApp conversation itself and you can send it through. That way, you don't have to copy numbers from an e-mail to the SMS app, and you can use more than one recipient. If you're sending more than one number, please do that using WhatsApp's multi-to-one or multi-to-all features. WhatsApp. Select contacts by clicking this icon. Click More. Click SendAll. These are the features that I cannot live without: Google Speech Recognition in Android. In Android 9, Google finally implemented this feature for a few apps. You can listen to user's spoken commands through Google Assistant when the are on, even if you don't have the app open. To use it, activate voice.activate (note: the version of this method may differ). Once you turn voice activation on, you can issue commands to the OS through various apps, such as Gmail, Maps, and Google Photos, and you'll hear your spoken commands through a Google assistant. For example, after you launch Gmail, you can say "Ok Google" to activate voice recognition. As long as the app is open, it will begin listening for your voice, asking "What would you like to do?" and then giving you options. You can also just say "Hey Google" to skip the question. Once it hears you, it will then ask for a clarification or give you an action. To hang up the call, say "Bye Google" or just wait for the call to disconnect. How to use Open Gmail Open a conversation that has "Verify using Google to send a voice or video call" as part of its messaging. Click the voice icon at the top. You can also tap the microphone icon. Select your desired phone number and click the Call button. Google will send
