Most animated films don't come along very often, but the one thing you can say about The Hobbit is that it exists in a very special place in filmmaking history. It's the first chapter of a present trilogy to be followed by The Hobbit: There and Back Again and The Hobbit: The Battle of the Five Armies. According to Peter Jackson, The Hobbit will be the first animated film, and that should come as no surprise, as Jackson brought on Weta Workshop and Weta Systems to utilize their new technologies to make the film as seamless as possible. Speaking to The Hollywood Reporter, the filmmaker explains that he's used motion capture before, but this was the first time he used it for an entire film. As for his "love it more," Jackson explains, "Basically, the creators have a sketch, and then they get the CG artists. And then I go in and finish it up the same." The team also used "real actors in some cases," which was applied to Gandalf and other CG creations. Additionally, the characters of Thorin and Bilbo "were not actors in a full body suit, but we shot them separately and composited them later to make them stand out."

Q: A search engine for freelance work or a local project manager? I'm a software developer with a client in a different country, I want to start doing freelance work for him. I'm looking for a search engine where I could check if a position is available. A: RescueTime does that for you. There are jobs in the topmost right corner, where you can see if any open positions fit your skills. It's also possible to browse the jobs. I've also just tried the job search on it. The search engine works very well. It will also index your previous jobs so you can see which companies you've worked for. Disclaimer: I have no financial relation with this company. 6d1f23a050
