Appearing on the HLN morning show as a guest, co-host Sade Baderinwa made a statement which is quickly going viral. During an interview with NBC 10 News over a dispute with her police officers, Baderinwa claimed that she has had to have protection in the past because she is "an open person." "They used to arrest me because they thought I was talking about riots, and I would be like, 'I'm not,' but I could not say it," Baderinwa said. After the interview was over and the cameras left the room, Baderinwa apologized for what she said. "I want to say I was wrong, I was in the wrong," Baderinwa said as she quickly added, "I apologize." In the video which has gone viral on social media, NBC 10 reporter John Hernandez told Baderinwa that he agrees that she needs protection and that she should take a hard look at her life before she continues to get "killed by her police." Watch the video of Baderinwa's apology below. Sade Baderinwa's full interview with NBC10. The incident started when the reporter asked Baderinwa if she thinks that the city needs more black people in leadership positions like the police chief. "I do have a different point of view, but, you know, what I'm saying to you is, my point of view is, it takes more than just people of color to pull people out. It takes people who have been in, who have been to prison, who have been locked out. It takes those people to know how to do it," Baderinwa said. "And the only way they can do it is if the people who are in power trust them. And they don't trust them." "Many of us who live in [North Philadelphia] have experienced what it feels like to be locked out, locked out of your community," Baderinwa said. "And I want those people to have jobs c6a93da74d
