
IK Multimedia MODO DRUM 1.0.0

for those of us with propellerheads, it is easy to pick up new software, and use it in a matter of days, it just works, for me i have never ever had a problem with anything on my pc, not even the latest launch of fl studio, it just works, i'm really really pleased at how easy modo is. modo drum does not fit into the usual plugin classification, it has a lot of similarities with an instrument, it can take a bit of getting used to, but once you do, you will have some fun with this drum machine. modo is different, and has its own sound, and this is the reason it has been so popular. it takes care of you, it plays nice, it is easy to set up, make sounds, layers, assign sounds, patch, it handles arpeggios, modulation, time signatures, drum fills, chord inversions, drumtoms, kickdrum fills, context based drumkits, and more. modo comes with a powerful library of 108 drum sounds. modo drum gives you more control over the sounds than you have access to with other products. you can load and mix sounds, you can create your own sounds, you can control the parameters of the sounds by playing them and using patterns. you can easily assign sounds to specific areas of your song or music project. you can also change the shape of the sounds to make them more difficult to play. modo plays not only drums, but also vocals, guitars, synths, pianos and many other instruments. you can layer your sounds, or assign them to specific areas of your song. you can layer sounds, and then assign them to regions of the project. all of this can be done at the start of a song or project, as well as during the mixing process. and when you are done, your track or music project will contain all the sounds you need to build your song or project. modo will even be able to find the sounds you need if they are stored in an external library.

create beats using the on-board synth, you can also create your own beat using samples or sounds from the included kits.

i'm actually thinking about picking up modo drum 1.0.0 just to see how it stacks up with sd3, i've not had a go with that, so if it's got some really cutting edge features that could have an impact on the way i play, well i'll be interested. ik multimedia modo drum 1.0.0 as far as i can tell from the demo modo drum will be a full featured offering, with quite a few features that some of the others lack (and charge for!) which could be a useful plus point. i have got a bass amp and a re50d, and modo bass is so versatile, from the standard v1 bass, to the more esoteric modeller, is so versatile, i may be interested just to see how it will perform with that. i don't do much live drumming, so will leave that to the pros for now. it will be interesting seeing how it performs with the 2nd soundfont. a pa4000? something else? modo drum gives you the option of either owning a physical modeling drum set complete with an oem drum skin, or you can sign up for the modo drum virtual drum set. when you sign up for the virtual set, modo will search the online internet for any free drum sets you may find that meet your specifications. when modo finds the right pair, it will ship them to your door. within a week modo will come and download the files onto your hard drive, and install the virtual kit on the site for you to play with. you can use these free virtual drum kits in conjunction with your own physical drum kit for virtual drumming, or they can be purchased separately. modo drum will come with a free drum skin created just for the instrument, which will be downloaded to your hard drive once it is installed. once the free skin is installed on the site, you can't touch it unless you buy the skin to replace it or make changes. the virtual drum set allows you to customize the single bass drum and snare drum, 3 canted kick drums, 5 tom drums, and various other aspects of the kit. you can even change the sound of the ride cymbal and hi-hat cymbal. when you are satisfied with the virtual drum set, you can purchase the skins for each of the drums, and the kit can be fully customized. modo has two choices for drum skins: native and virtual. both skins are available separately, or can be purchased with the kit. the native skins are ultra high quality h10 paint-grade skins provided to modo by a professional skin manufacturer, and are customized for use on modo drums. the virtual skins are created by modo from a sample bank that was created with similar or identical drums for use on modo drums.
