Setting up the ReWire plug-in was easy, particularly after Finale 2014.5 performance improved. In this blog, I had my library view in OmniPage (to make it easier to see the score), and had my sequencer in DaVinci Resolve (to make it easier to see the audio). I started from scratch and loaded the sample file above in Logic as Finale score (never liked Finale for orchestration, but I have to use it for now). I started out with an important sense of déjà vu, as this was the sort of thing I used to do in the early days of working with the latest version of Sibelius. However, I was pleasantly surprised, as I found myself changing tempo throughout the piece without the need to reload or rescore. I was pleased with the way the score worked in my DAW, but I still needed to upload the score file (via ReWire) to Garritan. The interface, however, was not at all intuitive. I had seen the “try before you buy” version of Garritan ARIA Player, but had just shrugged my shoulders, assuming that other features of the software would make it more user-friendly. The error message I had received once I tried to upload the score file to Garritan? Not a problem - I’d just changed the value in the sbfinale.conf file and re-ran the ReWire connection. I repeated this process about 10 times, and was successful every time, until I tried uploading the score file via the file manager. Then my ReWire connection again failed, with an error message stating that the file was “Read-only”. Bringing together the best in orchestration, the Garritan Orchestral Collection is the music world's ultimate instrument package. From the sampled orchestration of top-selling recording artist Mark Hunter to an orchestral scoring application for composing your own music, this is the ultimate tool package for orchestral music.
