It's important to note that there are two ways to use the [MEGA] plugin in Cheat Engine. Option 1: Run the game, then right click on any unit or building to access 'Options...' etc. Option 2: Enter the shortcut: 'C:\Program Files (x86)\Cheat Engine' (This should work for most users), then when you load the game, a folder on your hard drive will be loaded with the files required to run MEGA. I have included the 'Skeleton' script into this file, if you want a free copy, I will tell you how to activate it! In Summary, if you select the options above and right click on a building, then the first (longer) option will open, & the second (shorter) option will appear as the selected choice. But that's not all - the project is based on the award-winning source code from the Command & Conquer community, which in turn is built on the foundation of the original Red Alert game. The main difference here is that this project is completely community-driven, with fans taking the reigns. I'm a huge fan of the original Red Alert/Tiberian Dawn campaigns and have many fond memories of playing with my friends on our emulators back in the day. It's a total shame that we haven't seen a new C&C game in more than a decade, so I'm glad that this one has finally made it to the browsers. If you're a C&C fan, or if you just like a challenge, check out ChronoDivide and add it to your Steam library. If you're feeling nostalgic, or just looking for a fun game, this might be the one for you.
