What's New In PNG: Shapes Pack 1?

What's new in this version: The author has added the 4 additional icons. This is version 1.0. Any reason why they are not listed? If I'm not mistaken, those are at least standard Mac icons. The ones that are listed are only their PNG icons. Not any of the source files. In any case, if you would be willing to just give them the source files, I'll gladly add them to the app. Just send me an email to jsucas@gmail.com and I'll sort you out. Great icons but the need for a source version of them is very much the case. This is a beautiful collection of icons. But because of how icon sizes are defined in software and Apple's inability to have them, the first problem is that no matter how small the size of the icons are, in order for them to fit and look good, a lot of software is going to throw in a lot of extra padding and, thus, create two icons that are the same, but not really. The problem with this is that icons tend to be used in conjunction with a set. In some instances, we may have, say, a social media icon used on Facebook and Twitter that also has a "Stumble" button at the top to let us "Like" and post to Twitter. In this case, we need two icons with padding, one social media icon and the other for the Stumble button, and they need to be the same size. But because of the padding that is needed to pad the icon and set the width of the icon on the dock, these two icons are created differently. And that really messes up the layout of the dock and the overall look of your app. Sitting here using some icons right now that are 160 px on the dock and it looks like a mess. It might be fixable, but it's going to need a source icon that the developer of the dock application or whatever can go in and say, "this is the size of the icon and this is the size of the padding." If the developer of the dock application doesn't bother doing that, then it's going to happen. Sorry I haven't answered earlier. All the developer told me was that the dock application is an old version and as far as I could tell, there was no way to contact him. No matter how many times I asked him, he just kept telling me that the dock icon source was no longer available. Even if I managed to get the original source files, it would be too much of a hassle to have to recreate it all and it just takes too long. Actually, I'm starting to think that I'm going to have to go back to using Photoshop and recreate the icon. At this rate, it will take weeks before I finish the process. But then again, there is a lot of
